In this project, I am in the group DaiJouBu which group name comes from the Japanese language that means 'no problem'. We choose this name as our group name because we hope that we can solve the problem during this project easily. The sentence, 'Everything is going to be Daijoubu' inspired us to make this as our group name. Group DaiJouBu consists of three members, which are Angelica, Ng Pei Wen, and me, Teng Jia Jing.

Within the process of doing each task, I planned the time that we should call for the meeting and I would list down the things that we were going to discuss during the meeting for our group. I would also remind my group members of the due date for each task so that we can complete the work on time. Angelica did the work that required good writing skills because we cooperated several times before and we know that she is good at writing. Pei Wen and I did the work that needed calculation and drawing. This does not mean that Angelica did not do the calculation work, we would divide the tasks equally, if one of the members did more writing in the previous task, then the next task she would take the part of calculation or drawing. Pei Wen is a problem solver, she always gave us suggestions that will bring us out from the confusing situation when we faced some problems during the project.

For task 1, each of us distributed different designs of floor plans. After deciding the desired floor plan, we divide the task equally. Pei Wen drew the initial floor plan draft with scale, Angelica and me drew the finalized floor plan using computer software and online drawing tools. For task 2 to task 5, we used Google Document to do our work, so that we can know the process of each member while doing the task. Since this is our third time that we work together, we know the strengths of each other, and every member can apply their strength in the group project so that our project can be conducted more efficiently. What I learned from our group is that communication and tolerance are very important in a team. Communication lets us know the thoughts of every member and we should speak out our thoughts otherwise there might happen some conflict among the team members. Moreover, I also learned that we should learn to listen and accept others' opinions. This is very important when we were discussing every task because each of us has different thoughts and the tolerance among us let us can exchange our opinion peacefully.

I would like to suggest that the lecturer may give us feedback for every task so that we can know our mistakes and we can correct them as soon as possible. The feedback from the lecturer is quite essential to us because we can know whether we did our project in the correct way or not. At the same time, we also can test our understanding of this course.
