During the talk given by UTM alumni who were lucky to preserve permanent jobs in respective companies they share some tips for the students based on their experience. According to them the students should not limit themselves and give their full attention on what they are taking in the university, they should go beyond that and develop their skills. So that they

Gaining Skills Outside University Ali hamed abdellatif

As discussed in the meeting, students should not use all their time on university, students should also attempt to improve their social skills and to get specific training on something they would like to pursuit, but how to do so?

Below is a list of what students can attempt to improve their skills:

On-campus activities:

Universities are not only for regular learning through classes and assignments, it also has many activities suited for each field being taught in it, activities that can help students grasp a hint of what professional work will look like

Online tutorials and short courses:

Not everything is taught in university, some specialized topics can only be thoroughly taught through courses or tutorials found on the internet, on websites like UDEMY, accumulating should expose to new technologies that will improve their technical skills. Students is also advised to improve their communication and soft skills as they are important for any job candidate. Productivity and proactivity play important role in getting a job as mentioned by the speakers. The more the student shows enthusiasm toward work in the internship period, the more likely he gets a job offer. Alumnus also encourage student to participate on competitions and projects as they will give the student the chance to sharpen their skills as well as improve their networking.

that and your hard work in university will definitely boost your skills.

Gaining Skills Outside University Khaled Ahmed Sedik

On 29th of December 2020, the industrial talk 3 Alumni Sharing Session was held by Dr. Johana Ahmed, it was discussed in this meeting that beside university work students should work on their social skills in order to gain a specific skills in something that they will pursuit their future with, as it's mentioned above there is list of what students can attempt to improve their skills

Attend workshops: Enjoy the exchange of thought

One significant advantage of being a college understudy is the free workshops nearby. There are generally a wide scope of sharing meetings by speakers from different fields. There might be a researcher discussing his latest disclosure, a financial analyst examining the ASEAN economy or an individual consideration proficient sharing tips on the best way to eliminate pimples and take great consideration of your skin.

You can generally discover in any event a couple of workshops that appeal to you. However, how to approach discovering them?

The best route is to buy in to the emailers of different workshop-suppliers'. Your own school may offer talks identified with scholastics. Some understudy clubs likewise welcome speakers to grounds and you'd ensure you become the club part (frequently by paying a yearly expense) and stay in line with their occasions.

The less-attempted strategy is additionally to get into the mailing arrangements of the different establishments nearby that you like. They regularly have talks or workshops identified with what they are doing. Such open doors may not be promoted generally, as they just serve a lot more modest crowd, for example, the examination colleagues or graduate understudies. However, on the off chance that you share their advantage, do connect.

Overseas trips: Learning in the field

Besides, you can go on trips. The outings might be coordinated by your schools or by specific clubs. Such outings can occur during the semester, either throughout the end of the week or during the break week.

The different schools or clubs may coordinate trips dependent on a point, for example, an examination trip. On the off chance that you major in the region, it is an incredible chance to acquire commonsense encounters, for example, study the native societies in Australia or noticing the political changes in the Middle East. In the event that you don't study the region, you can likewise go along with them only for openness.

Developing Technical & Soft Skills Omar Hamed Abdellatif Ibrahim.

On December 29 2020 ,The industry talk 3 Alumni sharing session was was conducted and supervised by our honorable lecturer Dr.Johana in this meeting several points were discussed and have been opened up to the university students by fresh graduate students who were able to secure their permanent jobs throughout their internship during there last year of getting their degree adding on according to the speakers who shared their experience in the session they were all fresh graduates so the question was how they were able to secure the job and what skills was needed to achieve this target ? So their answer was during university time students should engage in social clubs, competitions and try to develop your leadership skills and boost your confidence level ,adding on university time is a crucial part for your future career because during this time we should be able to benefit from almost everything around us and try to expose ourselves to new topics instead of staying inside a box isolated and just focus on the study part ,studying is important don't get me wrong but also learning side skills is important and its most probably will be focused on during your interview for a job .So to wrap up this session students should observe and learn from fresh graduates and employees tips so they we'll be able to develop and get prepared during their University time and finally be prepared for their future interview which will hopefully secure them a permanent Job.
